Scope and Content Note

Focusing on Texas as it appears in maps dating from the eighteenth through twentieth centuries, the Lewis M. Buttery Map Collection consists of photocopies and facsimiles of maps collected by the Lampasas, Texas resident.

The bulk of the collection consists of maps of the western hemisphere, North America, United States, Mexico, and the Southwestern region, all showing Texas in various stages of its exploration and development. Most of the maps were published in Europe and the United States, and many were taken from atlases.

The maps have been photocopied in sections onto 11 x 17" sheets, and are accompanied by descriptive notes and information on their acquisition. The numerical sequence for these maps, used by the collector, has been maintained. The item description is based on the publication information compiled by the collector, with some additions or changes. The other numbers assigned to each item by the collector are also included in the description. The original list of items as submitted by the collector is appended to the descriptive list. To facilitate access and use, a chronological list of maps is also appended.

In addition to the photocopies, the collection includes several issues from a series of periodical publications by Old Maps of the Southwest, containing facsimile maps, additional source material and description. Three of these focus on military exploration and mapping of the Texas Big Bend region, led by William H. Echols and Edward L. Hartz. In addition to information on maps, these contain transcripts from diaries and other sources, which includes some information on the use of camels by the U.S. Army, prior to the Civil War.

Also in the collection are oversize facsimiles of three maps found elsewhere in the collection.

Most of the originals from which these items have been copied have been donated by Buttery to the University of Texas at Arlington Libraries, Special Collections Division.
